

Dennis Ndegwa (Bull) is a visual artist based in Nairobi, Kenya with over five years experience in Kenya's dynamic and evolving art scene.

Born (1998) and raised in Nairobi, my practice is rooted in capturing the rhythms, resilience and resourcefulness of everyday Kenyan life. My art echoes both the vibrancy and grit of my surroundings.

In my recent body of works, I creatively combine acrylics and recycled 'unga' paper drawing inspiration from bodabodas, using them as symbolic vessels for Kenya's economic shifts, urban motion and the relentless grit of its people as they hustle for their daily bread Or 'kutafuta unga' as we call it in the streets. Through the layered surfaces and bold visuals, I explore themes of survival, innovation and the hustle that defines Kenya's social and cultural fabric.

Driven by a desire to document contemporary Kenyan identity, I transform ordinary scenes into vivid narratives. My work not only celebrates the hardworking spirit of those around me but also highlights sustainability through use of repurposed materials.
